

Week 3 - Growth in fishes

- Growth of an organism can be defined as a change in its size over a period of time.
- Growth is known to be regulated by certain hormones, especially the growth hormone synthesized in the pituitary gland.
- Age and growth can be determined by rearing the fish in a controlled environment, tagging, length frequency distribution, scales, vertebrae, opercular bone Otoliths.